Smart after ensemble

SPRING IS HERE!

Long before Spring arrives according to its scheduled time in the calendar there are signs in the smart millinery salons of the new season. Although millinery modes are always changing, the appearance of the first straws is of more than ordinary interest. The advance models combine straw and feathers, and the brims are a little freakish. The first model to be seen is in one of the black shiny straws with upturned brim and a feather pom-pom. Then follows another black straw with a curiously pleated crown, a brim with a becoming 'dip' over the eye and a decorative quill drawn through the crown.

FASHION POINTS

Artificial flowers are being used in many different ways. It is somewhat surprising to see bunches of large pale pink silk roses tucked under the high fluted epaulettes of an otherwise plainly cut black velvet dress, or trails of delicately shaded flowers used to enhance the width of sleeves just above the elbow.

In checks and stripes, velvet as a well-beloved old-world fabric returned to us in new guises. A directoire waistcoat of black and white striped velvet, with a thick cream stripe between, is very smart. This is worn with patch pockets and steel buttons, and one of the latest—and most trying—touches of the same fabric mixed with black cloth goes with it.

Cords and lattice-work are used on gloves as well as for dresses, and the former in silver and gold is among the newest hat trimmings.

Coats reflect many of the details of dresses and have lost their old rigidity. Spring coats being easy in line and light in material. Many of them are dressmakers' and not tailors' coats and are as temperamental as their designers. Cowled or pocket tops are frequent on the sleeves of afternoon and evening coats and on more wintry coats fur is placed about the elbows. One designer combines front fullness and long wrinkled sleeves with square tops.

Hats, turned back from the face and showing the forehead are being made of felt and of material. Some are like 'sou'-westers; others are mounted on front bandeaux and are set back to look like halos.

SHOPPING ABOUT TOWN

BY "JULIE"

Maizee

I had just entered Maizee's when a number of interesting parcels and boxes arrived. Being naturally curious I stayed on and watched Maizee unpack them. It was certainly worth it for out of one of the boxes came the dinkiest hats imaginable, all the latest style too. In another box were some Colderol velvet jackets with hats of the same material to match. In another were dresses! Looking at them I wished I had thousands of dollars. I would have spent them all there and then. But what was really the most important item were some "Helena Rubenstein" beauty preparations. These cosmetics are very well-known and are specially suited to this kind of a climate.

Miss Naylor Importer of Dresses

Perhaps some of our most practicable and convenient fashions of to-day are the Swagger Suits. These three piece suits can really be worn in three different ways and perhaps that is why they are so popular. Miss Naylor has some very chic ones comprising of a three quarter length coat, a skirt and a top, and a little coatee to go over the top. The two I liked best of all were of woven dark blue and reddish material set off with buttons and beautifully cut. Another thing that caught my fancy were some novel vanity cases in all designs—rather a nice present to give to a friend.

Lane Crawford

The most important item at Lane Crawford's this week seems to be their sale of dresses. Ranging from every type of a frock for every occasion, made from every possible material they have indeed a good selection. Some pretty and practical day and afternoon dresses caught my eye as I was looking round. One was of grey woven wool with the new-fashioned wide sleeve, trimmed with light and dark blue. Two small pleats from the shoulder came across the front and completed the dress. The price too was very reasonable only $29.50. Another that cost $19.75 was of soft beige trimmed artistically with red buttons. I also liked another beige one. In this one it wasn't so much the pattern as the intricate way it was cut, though the finish off in red morocaine gave it just the right finishing touch. They have some fascinating evening dresses that seem almost too good to be true but still there they are for I saw them with my own eyes.

Whiteaway

With Spring coming on housewives will soon get busy spring cleaning, renewing here and there, and countless other jobs that are done every year. Here is a wonderful chance offered by Whiteaways to renew your curtains and slips etc., at the minimum cost you can possibly expect. Bright cretonnes in every shade and colour are now reduced to under half their prices. Some of the shadow tissues and Chintzes that were originally sold at 2.75 a yd. are now being sold at 1.25 and 90 cts. Another advantage of these cretonnes are that they are all in fast colours so that there is no fear of sending them to the wash. There is also a pretty good selection of bath towels, carpets, and rugs, with 25% reduction on all these goods.

REVIVAL OF LACE

Lace is having an interesting revival. Old and new laces are being adapted to present-day modes for the older woman, and the result is charming and distinguished looking. The importance of the wide shoulder fashion is accentuated by 'straight-cut' circular capes or berthes, which give distinction to designed frocks in velvet or more.

true but still there they are for I saw them with my own eyes.

Miss Mae Clarke in "The Final Edition" wears a frock of wool crepe with a Roman striped collar and skirt of ermine.

The Changing Silhouette

One of the surprising things in life is the way in which women seem to be able completely to change their figures in accordance with the dictates of Fashion.

Actually, of course, it is done by standards of comparison. If slender hips are considered to be the highest form of feminine beauty, hips and busts are accentuated to create this illusion. If hips are definitely not in vogue, shoulders are broadened, so that the body appears to taper off as the lines descend. When height is in fashion, small, high hats and long, tight skirts add inches to our stature.

Our Adaptable Figures
Almost every part of the body has at one time or another been subjected to some kind of fashionable disfigurement for fashion's sake. Every shape and size of figure has been in vogue at one time or another. The pictures in any representative art gallery reveal how often the fashion in feminine beauty has changed. Notice the difference between the portly form of a damsel in a picture by Rubens and that of the boy-like figures of the modern ladies depicted by Augustus John. These examples show how the figure has been inflated and deflated in the cause of fashion.

Apart from variations, however, in physical configuration, there have been marked changes in what is commonly called the "silhouette." The waist, for instance, has migrated up and down the gamut of the female form from the frontiers of the breasts to the "hinterland" of the hips. At the present moment, it varies from the high waist of the Empire period to what is anatomically considered the "natural waist."

Silhouette of the Moment
It is curious how old-time fashions, over which we have all laughed when looking through the old family albums, are being subtly adopted by the young woman of to-day.

The silhouette of the moment is to follow the figure with, if you choose, a little emphasis to the curve of the bust, and a drawing together of the fullness towards the back to give that suggestion of what the Edwardians used to call, "a very fine figure." A wise maxim for all time in fashion criticism might be—Despise not the fashions of your parents, for you may yet live to see them worn by your children.

WHAT THE WELL-DRESSED WOMAN IS DOING

AROUND AND ABOUT LONDON

Glove Styles.—Velvet gloves and examples in moire and plain silk, in black and many colours seem to retain their popularity. Red velvet gloves are smart for Christmas parties. Organdie and lace gloves have been relegated to the evening. Lace is mixed with fine silk, and with frills and goffering the arm can carry out an attractive two-coloured scheme. Mittens of lace look well with picture ball frocks. Cream and pale shades in exquisitely fitted long suede gloves will, however, appear with this year's evening fashion. Some evening gloves are made of fine black suede, with embroidered jewels in colours lightly dusted on to backs and hems. Then comes the question of bracelets. Bands of diamonds cannot be comfortably worn with gloves. For country wear loose bog-skin and coarsely knitted silk (such as are worn hunting) are smart. For town, dark kid and suede predominate, relieved with lighter stitchery, and fanciful decoration on wristbands and gauntlets. With black suits white, kid or suede is smart, stitched black or vice versa. Brown and beige are good with tweeds, and dark navy with white. Lighter gloves with darker stockings and shoes are another popular mode. Heels are high, and still higher for the evening, when in gold and silver kid and matching crepe de Chine trimmed with diamond stud or beautiful buckles.

Millinery Modes.—Mid-winter hats show that milliners are still kindly disposed towards berets. The trimming is placed on the summit of the crown. A black velvet beret, the crown of which is folded and padded to fit close to the head, has a flat motif of paradise feathers and half a dozen strands of osprey laid flat on the top. Hats made from fine velour are cut plain to the head.

The outline is the most important feature. The crown may be swept upwards at one side and carried forward to a point, or turned back in front into the shape of a Russian coronet. Close fitting hats worn at the back of the head are bound with a flat band of overlapping feathers. Sailor hats in velour with very flat crowns are shown for wear with tailored tweed suits. There are still rather flat messenger boy caps with a brief peak at one side, with a quill or two drawn through slots in the crown.

White felt hats and others made from light-weight materials are shown for cruising. Fancy trimming is used. A white felt hat shows a band of coloured plaited wool round the crown and another carried over the top. Silk hats with stitched peter-sham brims are light and cool.

Winter Jewellery.—The very high, often complicated necklaces are pushing the necklace rather into the background, and giving importance to the brooch. Bracelets appear in pairs, worn one on each arm over long tight sleeves or fitted gloves. Bracelets are much narrower and looser. When wider, only one is worn on the left wrist. Very long slender earrings are popular with low-necked evening frocks or dangling inside ruffled collars when they stand out sufficiently from the neck.

Cravats.—There are evening dresses of printed flat crapes in large designs on dark grounds; they are cut straight and plain with tulle or lace effect. Daytime clothes for cravats appear in new textures of pique, in linen, and in cottons with a wavy design and rough finish. There is a tendency towards darker colours, such as indigo, rust red, and greenish blue.

How She Has Revolutionised Cathay's Ladies Fashions

BY MEI YAN.

VERY little has been written about Chinese fashions in the past but commencing with this issue I intend to devote, each week, a column to this subject.

To start off, therefore, I shall give a brief resume of the change that has been brought about in Chinese ladies' fashions since, say, 1929.

The keynote of a Chinese lady's dress is, as you perhaps know, its simplicity, and that of course is the pass word for chic and beauty. The Chinese woman did not really come out of her shell till about four or five years ago when the younger set in Shanghai revolutionised their social standing by following the mode of living of their western sisters. Since then they have progressed by leaps and bounds. Here, one is inclined to use the word "improved" instead of "progressed" because though the term "make-up" was familiar enough to them, the actual meaning of it was lost in that they were totally ignorant of the blending and colour harmony of cosmetics.

Her general outlook in life having been entirely changed and improved through closer intercourse with the Western world, Miss China to-day can more than hold her own against the best the West can offer in the way of dress and make-up. There is a mistaken idea that the best modes are turned out in Shanghai which has been termed the fashion centre of China. I will not argue about Shanghai being the fashion centre, but so far as original creations are concerned, some of the local Chinese tailors can and do turn out the most exquisite and delightful gowns—gowns that the Northern designers are not slow in copying.

While on the subject of these long flowing dresses, how many of us know that the chief factor towards making these gowns so charming lies in the trimmings? When one looks at a completed dress, the trimmings seem insignificant enough, but take them off, and no matter how expensive a material the dress is made of, it loses that finishing touch that is so vitally important.

At this stage one may ask, what is it that makes these Chinese dresses so fascinating? Opinions may differ of course, but to my mind it is because they show so little and yet so much. In the case of European-styled dresses, one does not have to use one's imagination to the extent demanded by slit-skirts and curves created by these close-fitting gowns. It would be no exaggeration to say that a really well-dressed Chinese lady is like the proverbial "thing of beauty" and everywhere to-day, in the ballroom and on the race-course, she is the cynosure of many pairs of eyes.

While we are raving about these Oriental dresses, let us not lose track of the important part played by the "accessories." Gloves, stockings, shoes, earrings and even the insignificant scarf—they all help to make Miss China really bien soignee, and as we are only in the dawn of this new age, we may be sure that even more intriguing designs will be created as time goes on, and we may shortly see Miss China in a position to challenge, say Miss Europe, for the title of the Queen of Ladies' Fashions.

THE VOGUE FOR JEWELLERY

The vogue for all kinds of jewellery set with diamonds is at its height just now. Frocks with a jabot invariably have the fullness drawn together with a brooch and scarves have their ends fastened down with small brooches or pins, while draped necks are usually finished with a clasp. Evening frocks with a boat-shaped neck have either a buckle or clasp on either side; two or three bracelets set with brilliants and semi-precious stones, are also correct for evening wear. Buckle or clasp ornaments of this type are particularly popular and look especially effective on velvet hats.

WHAT THE STARS ARE DOING

Billie Dove (Mr. Robert Kenaston) is expecting a happy event to take place in April. The Kenastons were married last May after a romantic elopement.

Dorothea Wieck, who has completed her first Hollywood picture "Cradle Song" is to appear next in "Alien Corn" version of a New York stage play.

Marie Dressler's next picture for M.G.M. is to be "Mrs. Van Cleek" based on a story by Elinor Morgaunt.

Evelyn Laye is about to commence her new Gainsborough picture "Princess Charming" under the direction of Maurice Elvey.

RENATE MULLER IN "MARRY ME"

Miss Angel, whose name really is Heather Angel, was plucked by a talent scout from a wealth of experience on the stage in almost every one of Britain's colonies.
Having played at one time before audiences filled with Swamis or Sheiks, Sultans and Zulus, the young lady arrived in Hollywood
without fanfare, without any previous blare of the usual trumpets.

As a result of this procedure,
which is unusual with newcomers,
the screen colony was in a mood
to like her because she never said
a word about her professional part to anyone. Not that Miss Angel
is of the shrinking violet school,
but she would as much think of exploiting her charming self as she would her personal history.

Angel, a chemist who was blown up by the enemy in a London
munitions factory, Heather early studied the stage in a London
dramatic school after which she apprenticed herself in the Old Vic Theatre, playing without any compensation.

There followed a series of engagements in England and abroad
during which time she grew mellow, despite her youth, in broad experience. She played in the inevitable "Charley's Aunt," in which every young stage player
has a fling now and then, and in
a multitude of other productions,
including a scattering of English
film productions.

Although totally unknown in America, Jesse Lasky, who produced "Berkeley Square," selected Miss Angel instantly upon seeing her test. The cable to England was dispatched immediately and

"RACKETY RAX"

At the Oriental Theatre

Half-back boxers, wrestlers made over into tackles, gorillas who become guards, and Broadway belles
who go collegiate and become campus co-eds are said to furnish plenty of fun in "Rackety Rax," Fox
comedy which will be showing at the Oriental Theatre on Friday and Saturday.

It is a comedy-satire on sporting racketeers, who muscle in on American college football and attempt to make "big business" out of the game.

McLaglen is said to have a role
which is funnier than the parts he had in "The Cockeyed World" and
"What Price Glory." Feminine
interest is reported as strong throughout the comedy with Greta Nissen, Norway's pretty platinum
blonde as a tenderloin sweetie; and Nell O'Day, musical comedy personality girl, as a pretty and smart
young newspaper woman. Football bowls and stadia, as well as scenes
from many of the best known universities in the country, are used as backgrounds for "Rackety Rax."

Featured players included in the cast are Arthur Pierson, Allan Dinehart, Allen Jenkins, Vince Barnett, Stanley Fields, Marjorie Beebe, and Esther Howard.

within a fortnight she was en route to Hollywood.

The role in the John Balderston
production is by no means actor-proof and a difficult one for an actress new to the screen. While the part is a sympathetic one, its nebelous qualities require a sincerity and understanding of its subtleties, beyond the capacity of the ordinary players.

ECHOES OF 1859

81—The Governor and the Garrison
Officers

(November 16, 1859).

We have heard, yet really we cannot credit the report that His Excellency the Governor yesterday took up the matter of the Parsees being excluded from the theatre, but in vain. His Excellency it is added, has consequently withdrawn his patronage!

Surely this cannot be true—if so the officers must be infuriated. The whole mercantile community, for whose amusement and at whose expense, the representations are given, desire to meet the Parsees. The Governor especially solicits their admission, and is refused—but as matters now stand, acquiescence to Sir Hercules' request would have been not only a gentlemanly act, but it would have released them from a very awkward scrape.

The subject has now assumed shape of a public insult, which it will be found the Parsees will not submit to. The last chance the officers had, has gone! If the above report be true, we shall have a few more written apologies floating about the town, or we are mistaken.

November 17, 1859

The report given yesterday about the Governor having retired from the patronage of the Theatre turns out to be correct. The following is the substance of the answer which H.E. through his private secretary, returned to the Parsees. It was copied in pencil in a very hurried manner by a friend, and may not be verbatim.

"The Committee of the Garrison Theatricals with whom His Excellency has had an interview state that the performance on this and similar nights are intended to be strictly of a private character. His Excellency thinks therefore the officers of the Garrison must be allowed the free exercise of their own judgement in the selection of their guests.

"His Excellency has at the same time requested the Committee to allow him to retire from the Patronage of the Theatre upon private nights, lest it might be considered to invest the entertainment in any way with a public character, or appear to identify him with a decision of which he cannot approve."

We now learn that H.E.'s influence has brought about an amicable arrangement, but surely some little explanation will accompany the olive branch. The secretary of the Committees should call on some of the leading Parsees, and make matters run smooth. H.E.'s influence must not be set at naught.

We shall be pleased to see, this matter arranged.

ASSAULT CHARGE FAILS

Magistrate Cautions Defendant

When two Chinese were charged before Mr. A. Hamilton with assaulting two Indian constables, they explained that they had merely gone to the assistance of two women who had called "Save Life."

The women, who had been fined on the previous day for possession of wild tree branches, gave evidence to the effect that they called "Save Life" because the constables dragged them up the hillside.

His Worship found that the constables could not have been seriously assaulted because they took four people into custody. He thought also that the women called out "Save Life" because they were being arrested, and for no other reason.

The defendants were cautioned.

FIREMAN DESERTER

Heavy Sentence Passed

A fine of $150, or, in default, three months' hard labour, was the sentence imposed on a Chinese fireman who pleaded guilty to deserting.

Mr. H. T. Brooks, Superintendent of the Brigade, said that defendant in year of service had ten offences against him. He deserted after changing into civilian clothes. He did not take his kit. The night before, he had been concerned in a fracas in Queen's Road West.

WARRANTS ISSUED

Two "Bankers" On Wanted List

A warrant has been issued for the apprehension of Kwan Yuchow, late assistant manager of the Tat Fat Bank, 61, Bonham Strand East, for allegedly obtaining $18,000.00 by false pretences from the Tai Yau Bank in November last year. A police circular offered $2,000 for the arrest and conviction of the man.

It is also notified that a warrant is out for the apprehension of Wong Luen-kui, late manager of the Tat Fat Bank, for alleged conspiracy to defraud. A reward of $1,000 is being offered for his arrest and conviction.

SIX MONTHS' HARD

For Embezzlement of $1,938

Sentence of six months' hard labour was passed on an employee of the Yu Cheung firm for embezzlement of $1,938.

Sub-Inspector Nolloth said defendant was entrusted with monies to be paid to the firms of the firm, and also to settle creditors. In all he received $42,729 over a period of 26 months, beginning from December, 1931, when the accounts were audited. On December 31, 1933, the defendant could only account for $40,791 of this amount. He was suspected of having appropriated certain monies in October last, and Mr. Lee Yu-kee had then stopped his wages. Defendant was straightforward about it, and asked that the books be shopped up. This was done on December 31st, and defendant then offered to pay back the money. He asked for time, until Chinese New Year, but Mr. Lee told him it could not possibly be done. Defendant was paid $90 a month as wages, and lived on the premises and had his food there. He had made no attempt to run away during the two months, and went to the station willingly, and gave the police every possible assistance in tracing the deficiencies.

Mr. Hamilton said he would probably have committed defendant if S. I. Nolloth had not spoken in his favour.

WOULD-BE ROBBERS

Arrested And Sent to Prison

Found guilty of conspiracy to commit a crime of violence, three Chinese were sentenced by Mr. E. W. Hamilton yesterday to nine months' hard labour. A fourth man was sentenced to six months. It was stated that the house they intended to rob was an address in Wyndham Street.

U.S. TREASURY

Resignation of Asst. Secretary

Washington, Jan. 6.
Assistant Secretary of Treasury, Mr. Earl Baillie, resigned today under fire.

He asked Mr. Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury, to release him as soon as possible so that he can return to his own firm, the J. W. Seligman Company. The recent death of Mr. Henry Seligman makes it necessary for him to devote his entire attention to the firm's business, Mr. Baillie said.

The Treasury appointment was merely temporary, and caused no great surprise to Government officials or bankers.

Mr. Baillie was under Congressional fire when he resigned, due to his connection with Seligman Company, which the Senate stock market investigation revealed had paid U.S. $450,000 to Senator Juan Legui, son of the Peruvian President when a large loan was made to Peru recently. Much of this money had come from the pockets of the American public which lost heavily in the deal.

Senator James Couzens of Michigan had demanded Mr. Baillie's resignation from the Treasury department because of this transaction.

In accepting Mr. Baillie's resignation, Mr. Morgenthau wrote a cordial letter in which he did not mention the names of J. W. Seligman Company or Henry Seligman.

No successor has been named yet.

FRENCHMAN

FINED

For Possession Of Automatic

WAS IT A SAMPLE?

Antoin Poli, 40, and Jean Geromini 33, appeared before Mr. Wynne Jones at Kowloon Magistracy yesterday with possession of 50 rounds of ammunition and an automatic pistol, without a permit from the I.G.P.

The addresses of the defendants were given as Poli and Company of Alexandra Buildings.

Mr. M. A. da Silva appeared on behalf of both defendants, and pleaded guilty in the case of Geromini. With regard to Poli, he said he understood the prosecution was withdrawing the charge.

Giving the facts of the case, Mr. Murphy said the police searched a room in Savarin House, Hankow Road, on December 30. Poli was present in the room and in a locked trunk, the police found the automatic pistol and 50 rounds of ammunition. Poli was asked for the key to the trunk, but he stated that it did not belong to him but to Geromini, and he therefore did not have the key to it. The Police decided to break open the trunk and found the arms.

Asked where Geromini was, Poli said he would probably be in the office, whereupon the police, accompanied by Poli, went to the office where Geromini was found. Geromini produced a key, which he said fitted the trunk in which the arms were found, but as the trunk had already been broken open, it could not be discovered whether the key fitted it or not.

Geromini refused to disclose to the police where he lived, but eventually did so about 10 hours after he was first questioned. By virtue of a warrant, the police searched his house in Happy Valley and discovered certain documents, which had since been found to have nothing to do with the case at all.

Geromini stated to the police that he had bought the pistol in Shanghai sometime ago, and admitted that it belonged to him. He had been in Hongkong for about four years, and had had the pistol for some considerable time.

Sample

Judging by the state of the pistol—it was new and had the appearance of never having been fired—the police suspected that it was used as a sample for trade. In the circumstances, they took a very serious view of the case.

Furthermore, defendant could not, Mr. Murphy thought, plead ignorance of the law, as he had been in Hongkong off and on for four years.

As regards Poli, there was no evidence against him beyond the fact that the pistol was found in a trunk in his room. The trunk was locked and he stated to the police that he had no knowledge that there were arms inside.

His Worship:—I think you did right in charging him at first, though. Of course now, his story is that Geromini had given him the trunk to keep and there is nothing wrong in that. There was nothing at all to make him suspect that there were arms inside.

Mr. Murphy:—No, there is nothing wrong in that.

Poli was accordingly discharged.

In the case of Geromini, Mr. Silva told the Court that he had been instructed to say that defendant bought the pistol in Shanghai from a Belgian about eight months ago. He needed it then to protect himself. Three months after buying the pistol, he returned to Hongkong and since then the pistol had been in his trunk all this time and had never been taken out.

Defendant was a French subject and, under French law, a man was required to take out a licence for a gun if he carried it on his person, but he did not carry it about with him, there was no necessity to do so. Under this impression, defendant had omitted to report to the police on his return to Hongkong.

RELUCTANCE EXPLAINED.
As regards the reluctance of the defendant in revealing his private address, Mr. Silva said he was instructed to say that at the time, defendant was staying with a lady friend in Happy Valley, and it was because defendant did not want to frighten her that he did not give the address to the police. As a matter of fact, defendant did not exactly refuse to give his address. He told the police that he lived "somewhere in Happy Valley." The name of the street was Chinese, and even now he was not aware what the name was.

His Worship remarked that notices were posted at all incoming steamers to the effect that all arms must be handed over to the police or a licence obtained therefor, and it was rather well-known along the China Coast that the Hongkong police disliked revolvers. He therefore did not think the plea of ignorance of local laws could stand.

A fine of $250 was imposed.

THE GATEWAY TO THE GORGES

Ichang Hard Hit by Decline in River Traffic

RESIDENTS IN UP-COUNTRY STATIONS

Owing its importance almost solely to its position as a trans-shipment port for the Upper Yangtze, Ichang has been hard hit for late years by the general decline in river traffic, writes Mr. K. J. Brookes in a special article to the "North-China Daily News."

Chronic unrest in Szechuen has had the further effect of greatly reducing the volume of native trade passing through the Gateway of the Gorges, though peaceful conditions prevailed at the time of a recent visit, there being no Communist forces within 100 miles of the city.

OPIUM TAX BUREAU

Opium revenue, formerly estimated at twice the net value of the port's legitimate trade, appears to have passed its zenith with the removal to Hankow of the tax bureau headquarters.

Foreigners dwelling in a cosmopolitan centre such as Shanghai are apt to picture with half-consciousness the lot of their compatriots in up-country stations as one of boredom and dullness unalloyed. Like most broad generalisations, this is far from holding true in every case, yet there are places where the cost may be pardonably supposed that members of the foreign communities must need either full absorption in congenial work or exceptionally attractive personal interests to reconcile them to the surroundings of their exile.

One such treaty port is Ichang, nearly 1,000 miles by river from Shanghai. Opened to foreign trade in 1877, the walled city, together with environs and junk population, is credited by the postal survey with some 110,000 inhabitants. Transfer of five married couples from the Yochow region in connection with the River Customs service has brought up the number of foreigners to about 55, including missionaries and men of the gunboats in harbour, and at the last St. Andrew's Day celebrations the little community set something of a record by mustering more than 100 strong.

Seen beneath the hovering mist which so often drifts down from the Gorges on mild winter days, the latterly low-level waterfront of Ichang could not be described as attractive as the Yangtze Rapid, a few miles away, where the large white-walled Catholic convent on the outskirts to let a launch from the American gunboat Guam take off a sailor who had travelled up from Hankow with the armed guard.

A Drab Waterfront

A first glance at the flotilla of sampans which immediately swarmed round the vessel, and all of which seemed to have acquired by some means a pretentious flag to flaunt in the breeze, was enough to bear out Ichang's reputation as one of the greatest opium markets in China. Leaden complexions, somnolent movements and lack-lustre eyes were the mark of the local type. A foreign official gave the proportion of opium addicts as one third of the whole Chinese population, and one would imagine that if his estimate erred, it was on the side of moderation. The revenue searchers undoubtedly leave little to chance in their hunt for smuggled shipments. Two of them, one after the other, were noticed swarming the foremast of the Chichuen, moored near the Ichang after having arrived from Chungking.

The landing of the airmail from Shanghai struck the first and almost the only note of modernity as a small party of tourists landed on the stretch of soft dark sand laid bare by the receding waters. A steep ascent, between rows of untidy matchboxes had to be climbed to the Bund, where figures painted on a wall mark the highest level reached by the floods. From this narrow way, with its characteristic figures of chow-vendors, letter-writers, and guards with sheathed swords slung on their backs as well as bayoneted rifles balanced at a perilous angle on the shoulder, there is a picturesque view down the matched street to the ship-pier in the stream, over which towers the lofty hill known as the Pyramid, though it is actually more like a sugarloaf, and resembles the ancient Egyptian monuments less than the regular faced hills beyond Kweichowfu.

Communist Scare Past

A visit to a medical missionary—who incidentally boasts of the only wall-papered room in Ichang—drew forth the assurance that the city itself is quieter than for some time. The danger of the Szechuan and Hupeh Reds joining hands and cutting communications on the Upper Yangtze was believed to have passed over, and there was no knowledge of any concentration of rebel forces within 100 miles. As an illustration of the comparatively greater safety of travel off the beaten track, not long ago a woman came to the Rankine Memorial Hospital, for the purpose of undergoing an operation, from Tsinan, far across the mountains to the south-west, where the Communist leader Ho Lung had his headquarters for many months.

Some months ago, it was stated, the headquarters of the Opium Taxation Bureau were removed to Hankow, and Ichang's monthly quota of the drug had been limited to a value of $340,000. Enormous as this seems at first sight, it is small compared with the traffic a year or two ago, when the normal opium revenue was reported to be about 30 million dollars per annum. Vast quantities of opium still pass through Ichang, however. The writer was told that in January last in four shipments by a Chinese steamship company 5,700 cases of the drug were unloaded at Ichang, 17 cases representing one ton. For this opium, which fetches high prices down-river, the farmers who tend the miles of poppyfields west of Chungking, and who are required by the militarists to allocate a certain proportion of their holding to opium, are said to receive as little as fifteen cents an ounce.

Two Cars Only

During a stroll along some of the broad but rough-surfaced, and dirty roads Ichang's first two motor-cars, acquired by Chinese within recent months, were seen side by side in their garage. One would imagine that their drivers have little chance of testing their skill, for outside the town there are no highways suitable for cars. A little distance from the waterfront is the exceedingly well-kept foreign cemetery, with its small chapel. Here a uniform row of carefully tended headstones marks the resting place of the three officers and four naval ratings of British gunboats who lost their lives in the Wanhsien incident of September 5, 1926. Several seamen drowned in the Upper River

DEATH OF MR. A. L. ALVES

Loss to Portuguese Community

FUNERAL YESTERDAY

The Portuguese community has suffered a loss by the death which occurred on Wednesday at the Canossa Hospital of Mr. Antonio Luis Alves, a member of a well-known local family.

Mr. Alves was admitted to hospital a few days previously and his condition was such that he sank rapidly. He was 59 years of age and unmarried. Formerly he was on the staff of the Chartered Bank, but established his own business some years ago under the name of A. L. Alves & Co., and was the local representative for many years of the Halphons Portland Cement Company.

Of an unassuming disposition, Mr. Alves made for himself a large circle of friends, being extremely popular wherever he went. He was known among charitable workers for his generosity and frequently gave assistance to many who went to him for help.

The funeral took place yesterday and there was a large attendance at the graveside where Rev. Fr. Spada officiated, assisted by Fr. Novati, Fr. Rossi, Fr. Rosello, Fr. Granelli and Fr. Masini. The principal mourners were Messrs. J. M. Alves and A. H. Alves (brothers), Mr. Leo D'Almeida e Castro (brother-in-law), and Messrs. L. and C. D'Almeida e Castro (nephews).

Among those who attended the funeral were Messrs. E. Abraham, C. M. S. Alves, J. A. A. Alves, H. Barnes, S. Berg, J. Basto, C. H. Basto, P. V. Botelho, A. H. Carroll, S. M. Churn, C. Hirose, D. L. King, C. E. Kew, E. J. Figueiro, H. M. H. Nemaze, J. Pestonji, A. W. da Rocha, C. A. da Rocha, J. M. da Rocha, A. J. C. da Rocha, A. B. Silva-Netto, E. V. M. R. da Souza, J. V. Remedios, A. R. F. Raven, P. M. N. da Silva, and A. H. Silva.

Among the wreaths sent were the following:—Lilly and Tiddy Sir Robert Ho Tung, Mr. H. Nemaze, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. D'Almeida e Castro, Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Silva Netto, Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. S. Berg, Mr. and Mrs. P. V. Botelho, The China Provident Loan and Mortgage Co. Ltd., The Halphons Portland Cement Company, The China Photograph and Radiocompany, The V. R. C. and the Club de Recreio.

are also buried here, in addition to a number of missionaries.

Not far away was found the recreation enclosure set apart for foreigners. This plot, which has good hard tennis courts, is held in trust by the British Consul for the whole of the foreign community. A scheme is afoot to augment this recreation ground by the addition of a clubhouse, which would fill a real need among those whom duty holds in the port with small chance of outside relaxation. It is believed that the clubhouse could be built for a sum of $2,500 of which half could be raised locally, and some of the big sporting organisations in Shanghai might organise a fund for the purpose. Lasting gratitude among up-river foreigners by offering financial help. There are already a Union Jack Club and clubhouses for officers and men of the American gunboats.

Ill-fated Railway

Beyond the Japanese Consulate, verandahed building in the characteristic modern style of the Germans whose Consul formerly occupied it, the town quickly trails off into picturesque scrub-clad hill country. Two neighbouring summits are surmounted by a large temple and a Chinese structure formerly used as an officers' club, and to the left the path back to the city follows the course of a broad cutting, half full of reed-covered water, which might be mistaken for the town moat. Actually, however, this is nearly all that is left of the ill-fated Szechuen Railway, which was to have had its terminus in Ichang. Riversides and city stations were built, about 10 miles of track laid down, and embankment and tunnelling work done between Ichang and Kweichowfu. On the abandonment of the line some of the rails and stock were disposed of to the British Government for use in Masopotamia during the Great War. Stations buildings are now in use as barracks for the garrison, and on the flat stretch of ground beyond the cutting is the military aerodrome, which possesses a scouting plane of antiquated design.

Ichang marks the end of the Middle River, run which is the sphere of activities of British armed guards. The tour of duty of a guard is approximately four weeks from the time leaving the battalion in Shanghai. Proceeding to Hankow, the guard makes one trip to Ichang, returns, stays about four days with the cruiser in Hankow and then goes up to Ichang again

BAYONNE IN LIMELIGHT

An Instrument of Argument

Bayonne, now in an unpleasant limelight, is said by some authorities to have given its name to the infantry's final instrument of argument. The bayonet, it is true, declares that the word, bayonet, is derived from an old French word bayon which was given to the shaft of a cross-bow. It is maintained, as the crossbowman was the ancestor of the musketeer, the word was inherited. Still M. Puysegur, a native of Bayonne, writing in his memoirs of his experiences at Ypres in 1847, declares that his musketeers fitted steel daggers into the muzzles of their muskets. These short daggers were said to be products of Bayonne towards the end of the 15th century. An English dragon regiment raised in 1673 was issued with these plug-bayonets. M. Puysegur's son invented a ring-bayonet which got over the danger accruing from the stoppage of the musket's power of firing when the bayonet was in position. At Killiecrankie, the English defeat was partly attributed to the use of the old plug-bayonet which produced the disability mentioned. The defeated leader subsequently invented a ring-bayonet on his own account but it was Sir John Moore, the victor of Corunna, who introduced into the British Army the bayonet fastened to the musket by a spring clip in 1805. The triangular bayonet was used by the British until the introduction of the magazine rifle, when it was replaced by the sword-bayonet. But whether Bayonne or the cross-bow has the honour of giving the bayonet its name, the language which the bayonet-fighting instructor uses is all his own and, in peace-time at all events, is the most fearsome association which the weapon possesses.—N.C.D.N.

before coming back to Shanghai. Altogether about 10 guards have been on duty simultaneously, protecting Butterfield and Swire and Jardine, Matheson ships on the Middle River. The officer in charge of the River Guards operates these from his headquarters aboard the Hankow cruiser, where, after making one voyage of inspection, he remains until his tour of duty is ended, the guards being under the immediate command of their N.C.O.'s, subject to the instructions of the shipmasters. First-class accommodation and excellent food are found for the guards on the British steamers, while at Hankow they are quartered in a hulk alongside the ship. The Navy makes every effort to make the stay of the military guard as pleasant as possible. Contrary to the general rule with coastwise shipping, trouble is usually expected from the outside rather than from pirate action in the vessels themselves.

Firing On Shipping

Parties of bandits and disorganised soldiery who have infested the riverlands at different times during the three years that British troops have been carrying out armed guard duties on the Middle River have adopted as their own peculiar form of sport that of indiscriminate firing on foreign shipping, and though shootings on this stretch of the Yangtze have become rarer in recent months, a keen watch is still necessary, especially where ships tie up for the night or run aground. The latter is an eventuality always in the mind of even the most experienced Middle River captain. One ship is said to have gone aground no fewer than 22 times between Hankow and Ichang. The number of British sailings on the Upper River is not held sufficient to justify armed guards beyond Ichang, at normal periods, though on the other hand American vessels are at present carrying armed guards from the U. S. Navy and Fourth Marines' right through from Shanghai to Chungking.

A few hours' steaming below Ichang, rolling hill scenery offers a foretaste of the Georges' superbly varied grandeur, and a welcome relief from the eternal flat monotony of the Lower River. The landscape, as yet more charming than ruggedly impressive, has the delicate appeal of the Chinese florists' miniature gardens. As one's ship, nearing her overnight mooring place, glides towards the setting sun, it is a delight to watch straggling black and white towns like Yangtze or Chikiang, with their fringe of baremasted junks, their pagoda and fengkuen towers, their pagoda and fengkuen towers to protrude the spires of air and water. The brighter patchwork of winter crops stands out from the clustering evergreens and autumn tints, and among the trees nestle lone cottages which would pass for Swiss chalets, rather than the traditional homes from which the men of the Yangtze watch the unifying, tickle moods of Old Man River.

CHEAPEST PLANE OF 1934

"Moth Major" Biplane

Probably the cheapest aeroplane of its type and power in the world is the 1934 "Moth Major" biplane. Its price—£695—is £130 less than was charged for a similar machine last year, a reduction made possible by even more efficient constructional methods and concentration on a single "Moth" type machine, instead of on three which differed in power-plant and certain other details.

The price includes full navigational and other equipment. Power is derived from the 130 h.p. "Gipsy Major" air-cooled motor which has already to its credit many record flights, including five successful transatlantic crossings, and is the only aero engine in the world that is guaranteed to run 750 hours between overhauls. In the "Moth Major" this engine endurance represents no less than 72,000 miles flown, at normal cruising speed of 96 m.p.h.

Nine years of continuous production, of experience gained in the flying of "Moth" light biplanes all over the world, have gone to the design of the "Moth Major." Three thousand of its predecessors are to-day in use, in the steamy heat of the tropics and in the bitter cold of the far north. Every kind of duty has failed to find the limits of their strength and dependability.

The 1934 machine possesses many improvements in design compared with earlier "Moth." The bucket seats in the two cockpits are larger, and permit the use of seat-type parachutes. Better wind shielding provides more effective protection against the weather. Other refinements are the unsplinterable glass screen for the rear cockpit, the roomy luggage locker and the exceptionally attractive dashboard. The de Havilland patent supplementary airspeed indicator mounted on the wing strut is retained; it is visible from both cockpits and has been found invaluable by experienced and novice pilots alike.

Maximum speed of the "Moth Major" is 112.5 m.p.h., attained at sea level. Its fuel consumption at normal cruising speed of 96 m.p.h. is slightly less than six gallons an hour, equivalent in still air to 16.3 miles to the gallon. Ultimate range with the full normal load of petrol—29 gallons—is 475 miles. Minimum flying speed is only 42 miles an hour, which means that the aeroplane can be safely and easily landed in a comparatively small field. Its "take-off" run is less than a hundred yards, even with no wind. The service ceiling of this type—18,000 feet. Seaplane floats can be fitted, at extra cost, instead of the landing wheels. Installation of skis, for use on ice or snow, is also feasible.

INEXPENSIVE TRAVEL

The first "Moth" light aeroplane appeared in 1925. Nearly nine years afterwards the "Moth Major" at £695, provides the best value yet obtainable in "Moth" two-seater biplanes. Evidently, under the present systems of manufacture, involving rigid official control and inspection at every stage, there is still far to go before the very cheap aeroplane so often forecast by the imagination, but not always informed, prophet becomes fact. Nevertheless, the "Moth Major" represents a definite step forward. Its price compares more than favourably with those charged for many types of automobile; its speed is much higher than that of the road vehicle, and it burns no more fuel and oil than a powerful car. Its operational cost per mile will probably be found to be not more than sixpence or sevenpence; a big car can easily cost up to a shilling a mile.

More Russians are obtaining certificates of British naturalisation than any other nation. A Home Office return for the past year shows that during that period 411 Russians were granted naturalisation papers. Germany came next with 235, Poland followed with 234, and Australia with 82. In all 1,741 persons were granted naturalisation during the year.

NANKING TIRES OF POLITICS

Miss Butterfly Wu as New Sensation

Nanking, January 8. Discarding for the moment the monotony of its political life, the Chinese capital has gone movie-crazy. The visit of the Chinese movie queen, Miss Butterfly Wu, has created a sensation here only equalled by few important political events.

The "Butterfly" is going to appear in person on a local stage in several dramatic performances. She will be supported by an all-star cast. She is scheduled to perform here for three days but although the premier performance is set for to-night, all seats were booked for the entire three-day engagement two days ago.

In compliance with public request, the famous actress may be induced to prolong her engagement for another week. When she is off the stage, she will also be busily engaged in the filming of a talking picture entitled "Black Mountains, Silver Streams and a Beautiful Woman's Heart."

The director of the picture is already looking all over the capital for a pretty Chinese garden to be used as its setting.

Guest of Secretary-General Miss Butterfly Wu was the guest of honour at a dinner given by Mr. Chu Ming-yi, secretary-general of the Executive Yuan of the National Government. A private reception was held this afternoon for the benefit of a group of local press representatives.

After vainly persuading the "Butterfly" to have a drink with them, the press correspondents made a concentrated attack on Mr. Wang Hsien-chieh, a famous actor who always takes the role of a villain in pictures. Assuring the pressmen that he was not so had a man as he looked on the screen, Mr. Wang bravely met their wishes.

After to-night's premier performance, the local Bankers' Club is giving a midnight dance in honour of the visiting actress.—Reuter.

THE STRONG ARM OF THE LAW

Berlin, January 11. Another proof of the consolidation of the new regime is afforded by an interesting order just issued by Premier Goering to the Inspector General of the Secret State Police and the Provincial Governor. Captain Goering says that several isolated cases compelled him to recall to all concerned that the Police are not only authorised, but under the rules existing are under an obligation to take every person suspected of breaking the law to a police station for the purpose of ascertaining their identity, no matter whether the person in question is in plain clothes or in uniform.—Transocean Kuo Min.

G.H.Q. BLUNDERS IN RETREAT FROM MONS

Why Smith-Dorrien was Isolated

By CAPT. LIDDELL HART

Some remarkable implications underlie the extremely discreet phrases of the revised Volume I of the Official History of the War, writes the "Daily Telegraph." This comprehensive revision supercedes the original compilation of 1920.

Military students have long been puzzled as to why, at the most crucial phase of the Retreat from Mons, in August, 1914, Haig's I Corps diverged from the authorised line of retirement, and turning south, left Smith-Dorrien's II Corps to fight alone, in terrible danger of being overwhelmed while isolated.

It would appear that Haig momentarily lost his head—a remarkable lapse in so stout-hearted a fighter.

Soon after dark on August 25 a small body of German troops approached Landreles and became engaged with the 3rd Coldstream Guards. The latter, recovering from the first surprise, successfully beat them off with a loss of about 120 casualties.

Urgent Call For Aid. But this, and a still smaller scrap at Marolles, caused such an exaggerated impression at Haig's headquarters that a telephone message was sent to G.H.Q.: "Attack heavy from north-west. Can you send help?" This appeal for outside help from an army corps 40,000 strong, which had scarcely suffered at all in the retreat compared with its neighbour, is rather astonishing.

Nevertheless the Commander-in-Chief, Sir John French, directed Smith-Dorrien to meet Haig's request. Smith-Dorrien, who was himself in far greater peril, replied that his troops were too exhausted to move.

Then at 1.35 a.m. Haig sent an even more alarming report: "Situation very critical." And a little later, although the fighting at Landreles had now died down, he suggested that Smith-Dorrien's troops near Le Cateau should come to his aid by marching straight to Landreles.

A Gap In The Records. "There is at this point," says the Official History, "a gap in the records." This sounds unpleasantly as if vital documents had subsequently been destroyed to cover up what happened. The Official History, however, remarks: "It would appear from what followed that Ger. Haig must have been told by Sir John French that, in view of the direction of the enemy's attack, he must retire southwards, not south-west."

Thus on August 26 Haig's Corps went marching south, untroubled by the enemy, while Smith-Dorrien's, with its inner flank exposed, was fighting for its life at Le Cateau.

The Official History says: "The serious difficulties in which the 5th Division became involved during the action of the 26th arose not so much from the lack of preparation of the position as from the belief that the I. Corps would be on its right, and hold the high ground east of Le Cateau, whence an enemy could rake a considerable portion of the line."

II Corps "Given Up For Lost." There is also a severe, if veiled, criticism of G.H.Q. for its failure to co-ordinate the action of the two corps on this critical day, or to keep them informed of each other's situation. "G.H.Q. seems to have given up the II Corps as lost."

It is made clear that Sir John French's pessimism grew during the following days, despite Smith-Dorrien's successful extrication of the II. Corps.

Neither the Field-Marshal nor any of his chief advisers had been near the fighting troops since the 27th, and he seems to have been unaware of the complete recovery of the 3rd, 4th, and 5th Divisions from the hard day at Le Cateau. French's dominant idea was to get away from the battle-line. On August 31 he received telegrams from Kitchener which

"Clearly showed the surprise and consternation of the Government at the course which the British Commander-in-Chief was taking in withdrawing the B.E.F. from the fighting line."

French replied that he had already been left several times in the lurch by his Allies; that if there was a gap in the line it was their affair; and that the force under his command in its present condition could hardly withstand a strong attack from even one German corps.

Foch Disobeys Orders. Despite Foch's entreaties that he would stand his ground, "Sir John French issued orders for the retreat to be continued."

In the eventual "Battle of the Marne," however, the B.E.F. made the main contribution to the strategic victory. Even if it had little fighting and did not push hard, its French neighbours pushed less. It was a battle of shadows.

The Official History also shows that one of the chief brakes on the chance of exploiting the victory was due to Foch's disobedience of orders, by which he needlessly involved himself and his neighbours in an awkward hole.

Alsne Failure. There is another important revelation on this next critical phase of the campaign. By noon on September 13 the passage of the Alsne had been forced by both

Mr. Anthony Eden's Interesting Address

When Mr. Anthony Eden, the British Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, was addressing a large audience of women in London a few weeks back, he paid them a high compliment. Many speakers, in talking to gatherings of this kind on international affairs, are content with variations on the theme that war is horrible, which everybody knows already. Not so the statesman who has shared with the Foreign Secretary the burden of recent negotiations at Geneva.

He dealt so frankly and fully with present difficulties, particularly with regard to disarmament, that his words surely deserve the careful attention of all British citizens. The isolationists, who believe in the "superficially attractive policy" of cutting ourselves adrift from Europe, will find both science and history against them. "Clearly," says Mr. Eden, after weighing up these factors, "a policy of isolation can avail nothing to keep this country out of a future war."

What, then, can we do to help with the restoration of political stability? "First, by consistent and loyal support of the League of Nations," Mr. Eden is too honest a critic to deny that the League has fallen upon difficult times, but the moral which he draws is that "it is just in such times that the League most needs its friends."

In perhaps the most useful part of his speech, the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs explained exactly how much we have a right to expect from the League. "It is neither a touchstone for all ill nor a repository of all knowledge. It is essentially a machine for assisting consultation between nations. Its wisdom cannot be greater than the collective wisdom of the statesmen who employ it. The greater the support we give it, the more it can achieve."

This admirable description prompts the reflection that, if the nations are loath to use the machine which is ready at hand, they are unlikely to find a solution to their problems by relegating it to the scrap-heap. For that reason, the very magnitude of international complications makes the right use of the League more essential than ever before.

extremities of the British line. All depended on Haig in the centre. From all the information furnished to Gen. Haig the gap had not been closed which had existed between the German First and Second Armies ever since the Battle of the Marne, and there was nothing in front of him but a strong force of cavalry.

"The prospects of a breakthrough never were brighter." But the excessive caution shown by Haig's corps seems to have allowed the golden hours of opportunity to pass.

"By the evening of September 13 the situation had completely changed. German reinforcements were known to have arrived."

Thus, as on later occasions, Haig's vigour on the 14th was belated, merely increasing the casualties.

But a still greater share of the responsibility fell on G.H.Q. "In the G.H.Q. orders there was no hint whatever of the importance of time. There was no plan, no objective, no arrangements for co-operation, and the divisions blundered into battle."

"The disappointing results of the operations on September 12 and 14 after which a deadlock ensued, seem to have been due to the failure of the High Command to appreciate the situation and exploit the still existing gap in the enemy's line."

As a consequence the trench warfare stalemate began.

The battle of Landreles was fought on the night of August 25-26, 1914. The first battle of the Marne lasted from September 6-10, 1914. By September 12 the Germans had made good their retreat to the entrenched line of Alsne. The first battle of Alsne began on September 13, and may be said to have lasted well into October.

Paris, Jan. 11. The French Ambassador to Moscow, M. Alphand had an interview with M. The Franco-Russian Trade Pact, which was initiated on Wednesday by the Ministry of Commerce was signed on Thursday at the Foreign Office. It constitutes a provisional agreement and is composed of three parts: dealing with customs formalities, Russian orders to be placed in France and with the establishment of a Soviet Russian Trading Bureau in Paris.

FRENCH QUOTA DECREE

Vigorous Protest By Britain

London, January 11. A protest by the British Commercial Councillor in Paris has been handed to the French Government, challenging the recent quota decree.

The protest is couched in very vigorous terms and the early restoration is anticipated of the seventy-five per cent. cut in the quotas allotted to British goods, which was announced at the beginning of the year.

It seems that France finds it difficult to forgive Britain for abandoning Free Trade, and seems inclined to discuss tariffs in a different temper with Britain than with countries which have always had tariffs.

France recently cancelled the fifteen per cent. surtax on British imports, but immediately cancelled out the concession to Britain by simultaneously reducing by seventy-five per cent. the existing quotas for British imports and adding 130 new articles to the list of goods subject to quota restrictions.

The action directly affected £8,000,000 of British exports to France.

The Import Duties Act in Britain entitles the Government to add one hundred per cent. tax on all goods from countries which discriminate against Britain, and it is a coincidence that the imports by Britain of French wine, silk, and fruit approximate £8,000,000 annually.—Reuter.

EXECUTION OF VAN DER LUBBE

Why He Was Guillotined

Berlin, January 10. The decapitation of Van der Lubbe, the young Dutch Communist, following his conviction on charges of setting fire to the Reichstag, should not be interpreted as a milder form of execution than hanging, states the Nazi headquarters.

They add that he was guillotined instead of hanged because, while hanging is an ignominious penalty reserved for traitors and such like, Van der Lubbe committed his crime out of conviction.—Reuter.

SENSATION IN YOKOHAMA

British Visitor Found Dead

Tokyo, Jan. 11. A shock has been provided for the foreign community in news from Yokohama of the death, in suspicious circumstances, of a British visitor.

The victim of the affair was a well-known British accountant, Mr. Alfred Copp, of the firm of Maurice Jenks, Percival and Ish, the London chartered accountants. Mr. Copp's body was this morning found floating in the sea off the Yokohama Bund, in the neighbourhood of the New Grand Hotel.

FOUL PLAY?

There were indications of foul play. The wrist-watch which Mr. Copp was wearing at the time of the apparent murder stopped at 12.55.

Mr. Copp was a Lieutenant in the Great War in the Royal Fusiliers and Treasurer of the British Ex-Servicemen's Association in Yokohama. His wife is in England. SPECIAL MESSAGE TO CONGRESS

From President Roosevelt

Washington, January 11.

In a special message to Congress, President Roosevelt proposes an amendment to the Emergency Farm Credit Act to enable the Government to guarantee the principal of the two thousand million dollar bond issue for financing Farm Mortgages, interest on which is already guaranteed. President Roosevelt says he is convinced it is the Government's moral responsibility to "guarantee the bonds which by his action will be put on a level with Treasury securities."

The securities offered must be backed not only by Government credit but also by physical property of a very definite value. Democrats have no doubt the necessary legislation will be passed.—Reuter.

N. CITY BANK OF NEW YORK

Shareholders Approve Share Sale

New York, January 10.

The decision to offer preferred shares to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was almost unanimously approved at the annual meeting of the National City Bank of New York.

A recapitulation of the proceedings at the meeting has been issued by the head office of the Bank, stating:

"The shareholders overwhelmingly re-elected all the Directors and endorsed the present management, and voted to sell $50,000,000 in five per cent. preferred shares to the R.F.C."

The attendance was the largest in the Bank's 122 years' history. 2,300 to One.

The preferred share sale resolution was carried by 4,547,348 shares against 2,722 shares, opposed.

About three-quarters of the bank's 90,637 shareholders were represented either in person or by proxy.

The shareholders approved the action which will result in its Trust Affiliate, the City Bank Farmers' Trust Company joining the Federal Reserve system, thus enabling it to join the new Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Earnings of 1933.

The annual report of Mr. James H. Perkins, the chairman of the Board of Directors, showed that earnings in 1933 were slightly in excess of two dollars per share on the 6,200,000 shares at present outstanding under the Bank's changed capital structure.

An unallocated reserve amounting to $40,000,000, not appearing in the balance sheet, has been set up. This is a new departure in American banking and follows the conservative European practice.

Book Value of Shares.

Mr. Perkins stated that the book value of the Bank's common shares, including the Bank and the Trust Company, was in excess of $21 per share. This book value does not include the shareholders' equity in the City Company of New York, Inc. amounting to more than fifteen million dollars.

The latter company was the Bank's security selling affiliate and the Bank's shareholders were now divesting themselves of its ownership under the Bank Act, 1933.

Deposits Return.

"Deposits at the end of the year, as shown in a statement made public to-day, aggregated $1,117,159,220."

This represents a recovery of more than half the loss in deposits sustained just prior to the closing of all American banks by Presidential Proclamation in March last.

The capital funds of the Bank and its Trust affiliate now total $184,335,657, without including the City Company of New York, Inc.—Reuter.

RUMOUR OF TAM'S SURRENDER DENIED

Decisive Battle in a Day or Two?

CANTON HAS NOTHING TO LOSE

(From Our Special Correspondent)

Canton, January 11. In an interview with the representatives of the Press to-day, a high officer of the First Group Army contradicted the reports from Hangchow and Nanchang that Shaukou and Kutien, the two strategic points about 55 miles north-west of Foochow, have fallen to the hands of the Government troops and that General Tam Kai Shou, a well-known commander of the Nineteenth Route Army, has surrendered to the Central Government.

He pointed out that if General Tam Kai Shou had deserted Fukien, the People's Revolutionary Government at Foochow would strongly denounce him. General Tam had not made any official proclamation in throwing his lot with Nanking. He declared that the Nineteenth Route Army is still holding Shaukou and Kutien where a decisive battle would be fought within 1 or 2 days. He added that the victorious reports from Hangchow and Nanchang were merely propaganda from Nanking. However, he admitted that the Government troops are gaining ground and that the Fukien forces had suffered losses during previous encounters.

Referring to the military activities of the Kwangtung forces along the East River districts the speaker emphasised that Canton has nothing to lose in dispatching several battalions to take up the garrison post of the 19th Route Army in southern Fukien while the latter army is concentrating its entire forces to combat the Nanking troops in Shaukou and Kutien. He said that when the Kwangtung troops took possession of southern Fukien they will remain there even if the Fukien forces were defeated by Nanking since the relations between the Central Government and the authorities of the South-west are in close accord, and that the Canton troops would be permitted to remain there.

On the other hand, if the Nineteenth Route Army made good progress they will push towards Chekiang and with Nanking as their ultimate objective so that they would not give any serious attention on southern Fukien as it is of no great military or political importance.

A RUSSO-POLISH PROTECTORATE

Scheme Causes Surprise

[Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).]

Reval, January 10. Reports of Soviet Russia's scheme to establish a sort of Russo-Polish protectorate over Baltic States—reports which were recently denied by Moscow—are now being confirmed by a statement published by the Estonian News Agency to the effect that the Estonian Government has been requested to define its position in regard to the proposed Russo-Polish pact guaranteeing the neutrality of the Baltic States.

The statement adds that the Estonian Government has approved of the proposed Russo-Polish pact on the principal condition that it be extended to other countries as well. This comes as a surprise to diplomatic observers here as Finland recently rejected the Soviet Russian suggestion and Latvia and Estonia were also reported firmly opposed to any attempt at establishing a Soviet protectorate for the Baltic.—Transocean Kuo Min.

COLD WAVE IN GERMANY

300,000 Workers
Rendered Idle

[Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright.)]

Berlin, January 10. The present cold wave, now entering the fifth week, in Germany has done considerable damage by making it impossible for the Government to continue a number of public works. More than three hundred thousand workers are laid idle, but will resume work as soon as the present unfavourable conditions have terminated. According to a report by the German Statistical Office this increase in unemployment during a cold spell was also felt in 1930 when 685,000 men had to be laid off. The corresponding numbers for 1932 is 418,000. Nevertheless, the Government is giving full assistance to the laid off labourers. Indoor work is not affected by the calamity.—Transocean Kuo Min.

WIRELESS IN GERMANY

"A Set For Every Family"

[Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright.)]

Berlin, January 10. Since the beginning of 1933 the number of wireless listeners in the Reich rose 17 per cent. and is now 5,053,000.

The introduction of popular priced wireless sets as well as the propaganda campaign of the new Government operating with the slogan "a wireless for every German family" and also the interest of the public in politics and cultural programmes are responsible for the increase reported.

A monthly tax of two Reichsmarks is levied by the Government for each set and curiously enough it is the one tax willingly accepted by the wireless fans. So-called pirate listeners-in, when discovered by the Government authorities are subjected to very heavy fines.—Transocean Kuo Min.

NAZI INVASION OF VIENNA

Unrest Spreads In Austria

Vienna, January 10. Unrest is spreading throughout Austria. Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss has assumed supreme command of Austria's semi-military Royalist Storm Battalions.

Two Nazis were killed and two wounded at Klagenfurt during a bomb attack on the offices of the "Christian Socialist," the Government newspaper, by members of the Labour Corps, the Nazi organization which was dissolved a month ago.

The attackers stunned and threw the Heimwehr guard over a fence, but he recovered and made good use of his rifle.

Eighty arrests were made at Klagenfurt, and 250 at Vienna. The capital was invaded, both above and in lorries, by members of the Labour Corps. Many had possession of bombing materials.

Thirty smoke-bombs were exploded in Vienna where a policeman and a woman were injured.—Reuter.

SPECIAL EXCISE DUTIES

To Collect War Debts

Washington, January 10.

An amendment to the American Liquor Tax Bill, placing special excise taxes on liquor from countries in arrears with war debt payments was yesterday adopted by the United States Senate by 40 votes to 39.

Amendment fixes a tax of U.S. $3 per gallon on wines and U.S. $5 per gallon on liquor above the tariffs on imports from nations wholly or partly in default with war debt payments.

The amendment now goes to the House of Representatives. Administrative leaders do not regard the vote as a final decision on war debts, contending that the proposal should have been considered apart from the Liquor Bill.—Reuter.

Berlin, January 10. The German Customs Police have uncovered serious cases of currency smuggling which are taking on ever growing proportions. TYPICAL DEAN INGE

"The successful man is sometimes a miserable object, a man who has lost the habit of attending to anything except things which help him or that hold him back, a man for whom all the finer and higher values of life do not exist." This striking observation was made by Dean Inge in the course of a sermon in South-west Cathedral recently. "Sometimes," he said, "he becomes arrogant and thinks he may allow himself to run risks, moral or financial. Now and then we hear of some humiliating exposure which surprises even his friends. Few things are more tragic," he added, "than the deterioration of character which often sets in at about 50. We must keep at bay the fatty degeneration of our conscience."

SIX MILES FOR FIVE CENTS

Demonstration by Diesel-Engined Car

IMPRESSIVE TRIAL

For a seven-passenger motor car to travel six miles at less than five cents, sounds rather a fair tale, but a Daily Press representative yesterday actually saw a car performing this feat. It was a car fitted with a Diesel engine, which outwardly resembled in every way the ordinary motor car. One could not distinguish it from any other car since it made no more noise, and in every way ran just as smoothly as the petrol driven car. The car was driven up several steep gradients and its pick-up was all that could be desired. The vibration is perhaps ever so slightly more noticeable than in the ordinary motor-car, but once the car is running it is absolutely smooth, and a maximum speed of well over 60 miles per hour can be maintained.

This British made engine can be installed in any old chassis, and by reason of the economy in operation it should prove popular. Less than five years ago the first British-built Diesel lorry made its initial run upon the roads. It was cumbersome, heavy and noisy, but to-day the Perkins Engine has eliminated all these drawbacks and, as yesterday's demonstration showed, the only difference between this engine and the motor we have grown used to is one mainly of running expense.

The crude oil consumption on the car on which the demonstration was given to our representative yesterday is 3 1/2 miles to the gallon. When the cost of crude oil against petrol is taken into consideration, the total saving approximates 7 to 1, so that if it costs $70 a month to run a petrol vehicle, the same distance can be covered by this new Diesel driven engine for $10.

The engine may be installed in any chassis in a few hours, without any alterations to any of the standard equipment, gears, etc., and the local agents are now busy giving demonstrations to people likely to be interested.

HONGKONG FOOTBALL COUNCIL MEETING

Wong Mee Shun's Suspension Upheld

TIENTSIN TO TAKE PART IN COMING INTERPORT

An appeal by Wong Mee Shun of South China and former Interport player against his suspension for the rest of the season formed the chief subject of discussion at the monthly meeting of the Hong Kong Football Council yesterday. The appeal was dismissed, the Council arriving at their decision on the ground that they were bound by the laws of the Association to accept the statements made by the referee who officiated at the game in which the incident arose. When informed of the Council's decision, the appellant indicated that he would make a further appeal to the Appeal Board.

Other matters discussed were that information had been received from the Shanghai Football Association to the effect that Tientsin would take part in the coming interport, and the resignation of Mr. T. A. Mitchell from the Emergency committee and the election of his successor, Mr. Hall.

FURTHER APPEAL TO BE MADE

Addressing the gathering the Chairman, Major C. M. Manners, said that the meeting was actually called in order to enable Mr. T. A. Mitchell, who was leaving the Colony, to be present as Chairman of the Emergency Committee to hear an appeal, but he was unable to come. Recently the Council wrote to the Kowloon Football Club, to which Mr. Mitchell belonged, to nominate a member to take his place, and they had nominated Mr. Hall.

The Chairman then proposed that Mr. Hall be accepted as a member of the Council, and seconded by Mr. James, the proposal was carried.

The Appeal.

The appeal by Wong Mee Shun against his suspension for the rest of the season was then heard. (It will be recalled that both Wong and Pte. Heath of the Lincolns were similarly suspended for fighting during their match at Sookun-poo a few weeks ago. Apparently due to the importance of the result, as both teams were struggling for the leadership in the Championship, tempers became rather frayed during the match and several players had to be cautioned by the referee. It was alleged that Wong kicked Heath while the latter was in the act of clearing, Heath retaliated and as a result both players were ordered off the field.)

In his appeal Wong admitted that he was an old offender and had a black record against him. He submitted that the statements made by the referee and Pte. Heath before the Emergency Committee which heard the case were unfair and went on to prove it.

He had brought several impartial witnesses who were present at the match to give evidence in support of his submissions, but the Council after hearing his grounds of appeal, decided that they were bound by the laws of the Association to accept the statements made by the referee who said that he saw Wong kicking Heath.

The Chairman said that there were several members of the Council present at the match and they all agreed with the report made by the referee. If the referee's action had been unfair he would be dealt with by the Referee Committee. Personally he had asked a member of the Council if the referee's report was correct and he had replied that the referee handled the game properly.

"I put it down to the Council that we find no cause or reason for further evidence in this case," said Major Manners.

The motion was then put to the members, and with the exception of Mr. J. D. Bush, all of them signified their agreement.

Addressing Mr. Wong, the Chairman said: "Mr. Wong, before actually deciding on what shall become of your appeal we would like you to know that it seems to us that you don't understand many of the laws or the rulings of the Association or the game. The referee had full control of the game and we, as a Council, must act on the referee's report and his report entirely. You have written us a very long letter which we have read very carefully, and we have decided that it is not necessary to call any further witnesses—we cannot see if it would serve any purpose. That is why we send your witnesses away.

"Your appeal has been very carefully considered and the Council has decided that the decision of the Emergency Committee be upheld. I am sorry you had taken so much trouble in bringing forward your appeal. I am also very sorry that you had occasion to be brought before us at all."

Mr. Wong: "I would like to have your decision in writing as I would like to make a further appeal."

The Chairman: I don't think it would serve any good purpose by bringing it any further. The Emergency Committee's decision has been upheld. But that is entirely up to you, Mr. Wong. It would only cost you a further $25."

Other Matters.

Other matters discussed were the receipt of a telegram from the Shanghai Football Association to the effect that Tientsin would take part in the coming interport. The local team will leave for Shanghai on February 9, returning on the 20.

Mr. Hall was elected to take the place of Mr. T. A. Mitchell in the Emergency Committee. A vote of thanks was also accorded to Mr. Mitchell.

Those present at the meeting were: Major C. H. Manners (Chairman), Mr. G. T. May (Hon. Secretary), Capt. Fleetwood, Lt. Hocquard, Mr. James, Mr. Hall, Mr. W. R. Hughes, Mr. C. Goldenberg, Mr. J. D. Bush and Mr. F. Barnes.

WAR INVENTIONS

£1,500,000 In Awards

Another link with the war period was severed recently when the Royal Commission on Awards to Inventors sat at the Privy Council offices, Downing-street, for the last time.

The Commission was set up in 1919 and has held nearly 400 sittings. It has dealt with no fewer than 1,850 cases, and made awards amounting to nearly £1,500,000.

Sir Thomas Inskip, the Attorney-General, who attended the farewell sitting, mentioned that the whole of the work had been done at a total cost of only £229,000.

Although the Radio Sports Club who are one of the best hockey combinations in the Colony, turned out at full strength, they could only manage a draw against the Navy Lower Deck when the teams met on the Radio ground, Caroline Hill, last evening. Play was extremely fast and in the first half Edwain Singh scored for the Radio team.

The same fast pace was maintained throughout the second half when the sailors scored their equaliser.

London, January 10. The Royal Navy rugger XV visiting Bristol to-day secured a comfortable win by 23 points to six.

Bridgend defeated Cardiff by eighteen points to nil.

The match arranged between Middlesex and the Royal Air Force was not played.—Reuter.

Though the latter team showed some good defensive work, St. Andrew's proved the stronger. Fincher scored the first goal and the other two were shot by E. C. Fincher and A. Baldwin. Reed distinguished himself for the other side and ought to be congratulated on his excellent play.

MAN AND HIS BRAIN

Sir Arthur Keith's Prophecy

A letter to "The Times" has revealed the results of an important piece of anatomical research. Dr.
 H. L. Gordon, visiting physician to the Mather Mental Hospital in Nairobi, has measured the cranial capacity of a group of 3,444 unselected Kenya natives.
 Dr. F. W. Vint, pathologist to the Kenya Government, has made
 post-mortem examinations of 100
 native brains.

Measurements of the living have shown that the average size of the Kenya native's brain is 10 or 11 per cent. smaller than the average European's; observations
 on the dead have revealed a 15 per cent. quantitative deficiency in the grey matter as compared with the cortex of a white man.

Yesterday, writes a representative of "The Observer," I went to Downe (where Darwin spent the best years of his life, and where the generosity of Mr. Buckton Browne has established a centre
 of scientific progress in a countrified corner of Kent) and discussed with Sir Arthur Keith what
 the inner meaning of these discoveries may be.

But before we discussed what these researches meant Sir Arthur
 was at pains to stress how admirable it was that they had taken place—that doctors in the tropics
 should now be directing themselves
 to—

"Anthropometrical research?"
 "No. It is more than that. I would call it, perhaps, enquiry into the nature of man."

"As to the facts revealed: of course it was known that the brains of many African races (the Zulus are a notable exception) are smaller than ours. But Dr. Vint's results carry us further."

"The only comparable investigation was one by Professor H. H.
 Woodard on the brains of Australian aborigines. I am speaking from memory, but I cannot recall
 that this revealed anything
 equivalent to Dr. Vint's results.
 The Australians are thought to be a far more primitive race, yet Woodard did not find the brains
 he examined to be so markedly different from ours."

Intellectual Power.
 "Now these new results are before us what conclusions shall we draw? That is the interesting question."

"There is a correlation between the size of brain and intellectual power; there is such a correlation,
 but it is so vague. Whenever I discuss this question I always think of the case of Anatole France. His brain (1,150 cc., I think) was to put it cautiously,
 not more than 80 per cent. of the usual size."

"Judged by his brain he ought to have been an idiot; and well,
 I shall leave it to you to say whether Anatole France was that. I haven't been able to get hold of the report of the examination of his grey matter, but I believe it was found to be highly developed stuff."

"Some people have even questioned whether the correlation be-exists at all. The brains of some of the prehistoric races in South Africa were bigger than our own;
 and the critics say, if there is a correlation how do you account
 for that?"

"My own answer is that it is harder to found civilization than
 to maintain it; that the founders of man's civilization probably had, in fact, more intellectual power than their inheritors."

"I believe in the correlation, but in practice you can't use it. We do not judge a man by size of his brain, nor can we judge him
 by examination results."

"So it is instructive to consider that an important experiment
 has been made unintentionally.
 A whole population of West Coast negroes (who are not greatly different from those of Kenya) was transported to the United States,
 and has been planted for a long period in the midst of a white man's civilization. And what happens? We have to try these things by the normal tests of life.

 Have the American negroes made
 their career in that white civilization successfully? Do we find many of them prominent in Congress, in science, in the arts?"
 "No. But that may be due to political reasons," I said.

The Case of Commerce.

"You mean racial prejudice? Well then take commerce. Racial prejudice can be overcome there.
 If a man has anything to sell
 which is in demand, whatever his race is he will be able to sell it."

"But in America we do not find negroes prominent in commerce
 any more than in the other departments of the white man's civilisation."

"The only results we can judge
 by speak clearly. I say not 'blow anatomy!' but 'leave anatomy out of account for the moment' because it is no sure guide in this:
 the results of life itself show us
 that the negro brain (leaving out
 the few exceptional individuals whom you'll always find) is not adapted to our kind of civilisation."

"I think that is the real point
 Dr. Gordon was making. So many people seem to imagine that the African civilisation was less developed than our civilisation is. The truth is that it was a very elaborate one: I'm not even sure that I wouldn't even say it might often
 be considered higher than ours."

"The negroes, as your own observation must have told you, are different from us. They keep those qualities of boyishness and girlishness much longer. These are qualities that make for happiness. But they are no use in commerce. In our civilisation they may be even disadvantageous."

"If the position had been reversed, I wonder if we should have made as good a job of adapting ourselves to the negro civilization as he has adapted himself to ours? We have the stronger
 magic—that's the trouble!"

Policy of Reserves.

"It seems to me that here we have two different kinds of civilisation—two directions in evolution—which don't mix: one destroys the other. What that seems to point to in present-day Africa
 is the policy of Reserves—the native keeping his own life and we keeping ours."

"Might evolution in some long period bridge the gap?" I asked Sir Arthur, "or, in other words,
 might one grow in a thousand years or so a bigger brain by using it?"

Sir Arthur thought not. "Before you were born, I remember
 there used to be a school of thought which held that woman's inferiority in size of brain (her brain is about 90 per cent. of man's) indicated intellectual inferiority, and was due to man's subjugation of her."

"I don't believe either of those things. And I don't believe unless there were purposive or accidental breeding for large brains)
 that we, or the negroes, will grow
 bigger brains by using them."

"In general, I think the general tendency of civilisation is towards smaller brains. Our lives are parasitic. Not one-half of 1 per cent.
 of us have to tackle original thought. We get it all out of the books."

As he looked over the wooded Kentish landscape it was with that disturbing prophecy of long-range
 decline that Sir Arthur Keith closed a morning's talk on civilizations and human brains.

MURDER CASE IN HONOLULU

Mrs. Massie To Divorce Husband

Washington, Jan. 6.
 Mrs. Thalia Massie, victim of the attack case in Honolulu during early 1932 which resulted in the murder of the attacked and inflamed
 the racial passion of the islands,
 announced to-day that she is going to divorce her husband, Lieutenant Thomas Massie, U.S. Navy.

She is leaving for Reno, Nevada,
 "divorce capital of America" tomorrow to establish residence for severance of the marital bonds at
 the insistence of Lieutenant Massie,
 she said.

"I am personally reluctant to make such a step," Mrs. Massie said. She declared that the Honolulu affair was not involved in the divorce proceedings.

Lieutenant Massie is now stationed on the U. S. S. Oklahoma in San Pedro, California.

The Massie case created a worldwide sensation. The naval officer's wife was seized and ravished by a Hawaiian one night. Shortly thereafter one of the men accused of the crime was murdered and charges of murder were placed against Lieutenant Massie, Mrs.
 Granville Roland Fortescue, his mother-in-law and Seamen Jones and Lord. They were convicted of the crime but later Governor Lawrence Judd commuted their sentences.—United Press.

BOMBING ECHO IN U.S.
Billings Denied Parole
 Polson, Calif., January 6.
 Warren K. Billings, convicted with Thomas Mooney for the Preparedness Day bombing massacre
 in San Francisco in 1916, was today denied parole by the California
 State Board of Pardons and Parole.
 The parole denial was a terrific blow to the radical as he had believed for years he could get parole for the asking, only he had consistently refused to file a parole
 application on the grounds he felt
 it involved tacit admission of guilt.
 Billings, in seeking the parole,
 violated the wishes of Mooney,
 who has insisted that parole would be tantamount to confession of guilt.
 "I disagree with Tom," the prisoner said, "and I don't care what he thinks. He's always wanted to do as Tom Mooney ordered. This time I'm acting for myself, standing on my feet."
 During Mooney's constant efforts
 to win a pardon and during all
 the international labour strife that has resulted from the case, Billings has remained mostly in the role of "Forgotten Man" and his case was kept in the background,
 largely because he had been previously convicted of crimes.
 Billings' application for a parole
 also brought from him a new version of the 1916 dynamiting in which 10 persons were killed. He claimed Lou Smith, now dead, threw a bomb at a suitcase on the sidewalk. The plan, he said, was to blame Mooney for the bombing
 but to have the deadly missile
 fall harmlessly on the suitcase.
 Smith missed his object, and the fatal explosion occurred, according to Billings.
 Billings has the privilege of making another parole application
 next year.—United Press.

DE VALERA WANTS REDUCTION
 [Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).]
 Berlin, January 11.
 A secret, conclusive of the Flan-
 na Fall Party gave rise to a fresh crop of rumours concerning the forthcoming dissolution of Parliament. Although nothing definite has transpired regarding the proceedings at the conclave
 it is stated from a reliable source that de Valera is anxious to reduce the number of members of Parliament from 153 to 128. According to Press reports de Valera's policy was sharply criticism by representatives from agricultural districts owing to the unprecedented fall in prices of agricultural produce resulting from British measures against Irish imports. The report asserts that de Valera's attitude towards General O'Duffy's "Blue Shirts"
 likewise encountered considerable opposition.—Transocean Kuo Min.

TITULESCU ACCEPTS POST
 Bucharest, Jan. 11.
 M. Titulescu's acceptance of the post of Minister of Foreign Affairs
 in the Rumanian Cabinet, which followed a long conference with His Majesty, King Carol, is considered as meaning a clean sweep of the Palace Camarilla, who are alleged to be playing fast and loose
 with Rumanian politics.
 The King's private secretary, M.
 Dumitrescu, is being dismissed, also his father, who commanded the Gendarmes, and the General-in-Charge of the Secret Service.
 All three are credited with some connection with the "Iron Guard."
 The King demurred, and for some time it was thought possible
 that a dictatorship would ensue,
 but both the great political parties,
 Liberals and Peasants resolutely
 opposed this.
 It is also rumoured that M.
 Titulescu has demanded the departure of Madame Tapescu. Her whereabouts are at present unknown, but it is believed that she has already gone.—Reuter.

NAVAL UNREST IN SIAM

Bangkok, Jan. 11.
 Owing to some trouble in the Siamese Navy, which does not entirely favour the present government, the publication of military
 news has been forbidden.—Reuter
